Our guides offer organisations the opportunity to tell their story to our readers through the pages of National Geographic Traveller (UK), overseen by the in-house editorial and design teams.

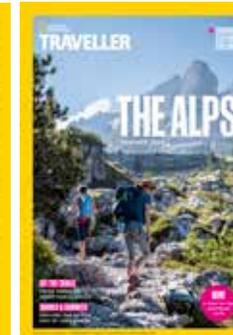

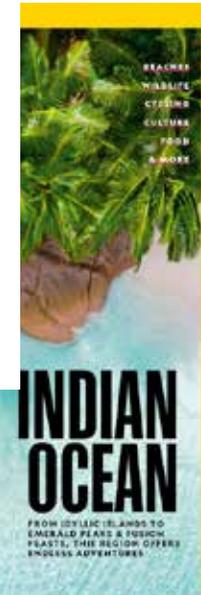

Guides are designed for organisations that have a particularly engaging story to tell, fully in keeping with the National Geographic Traveller (UK) brand and ethos. They're written by one or more of our journalists following a trip to the destination specifically for the purpose of writing about it.

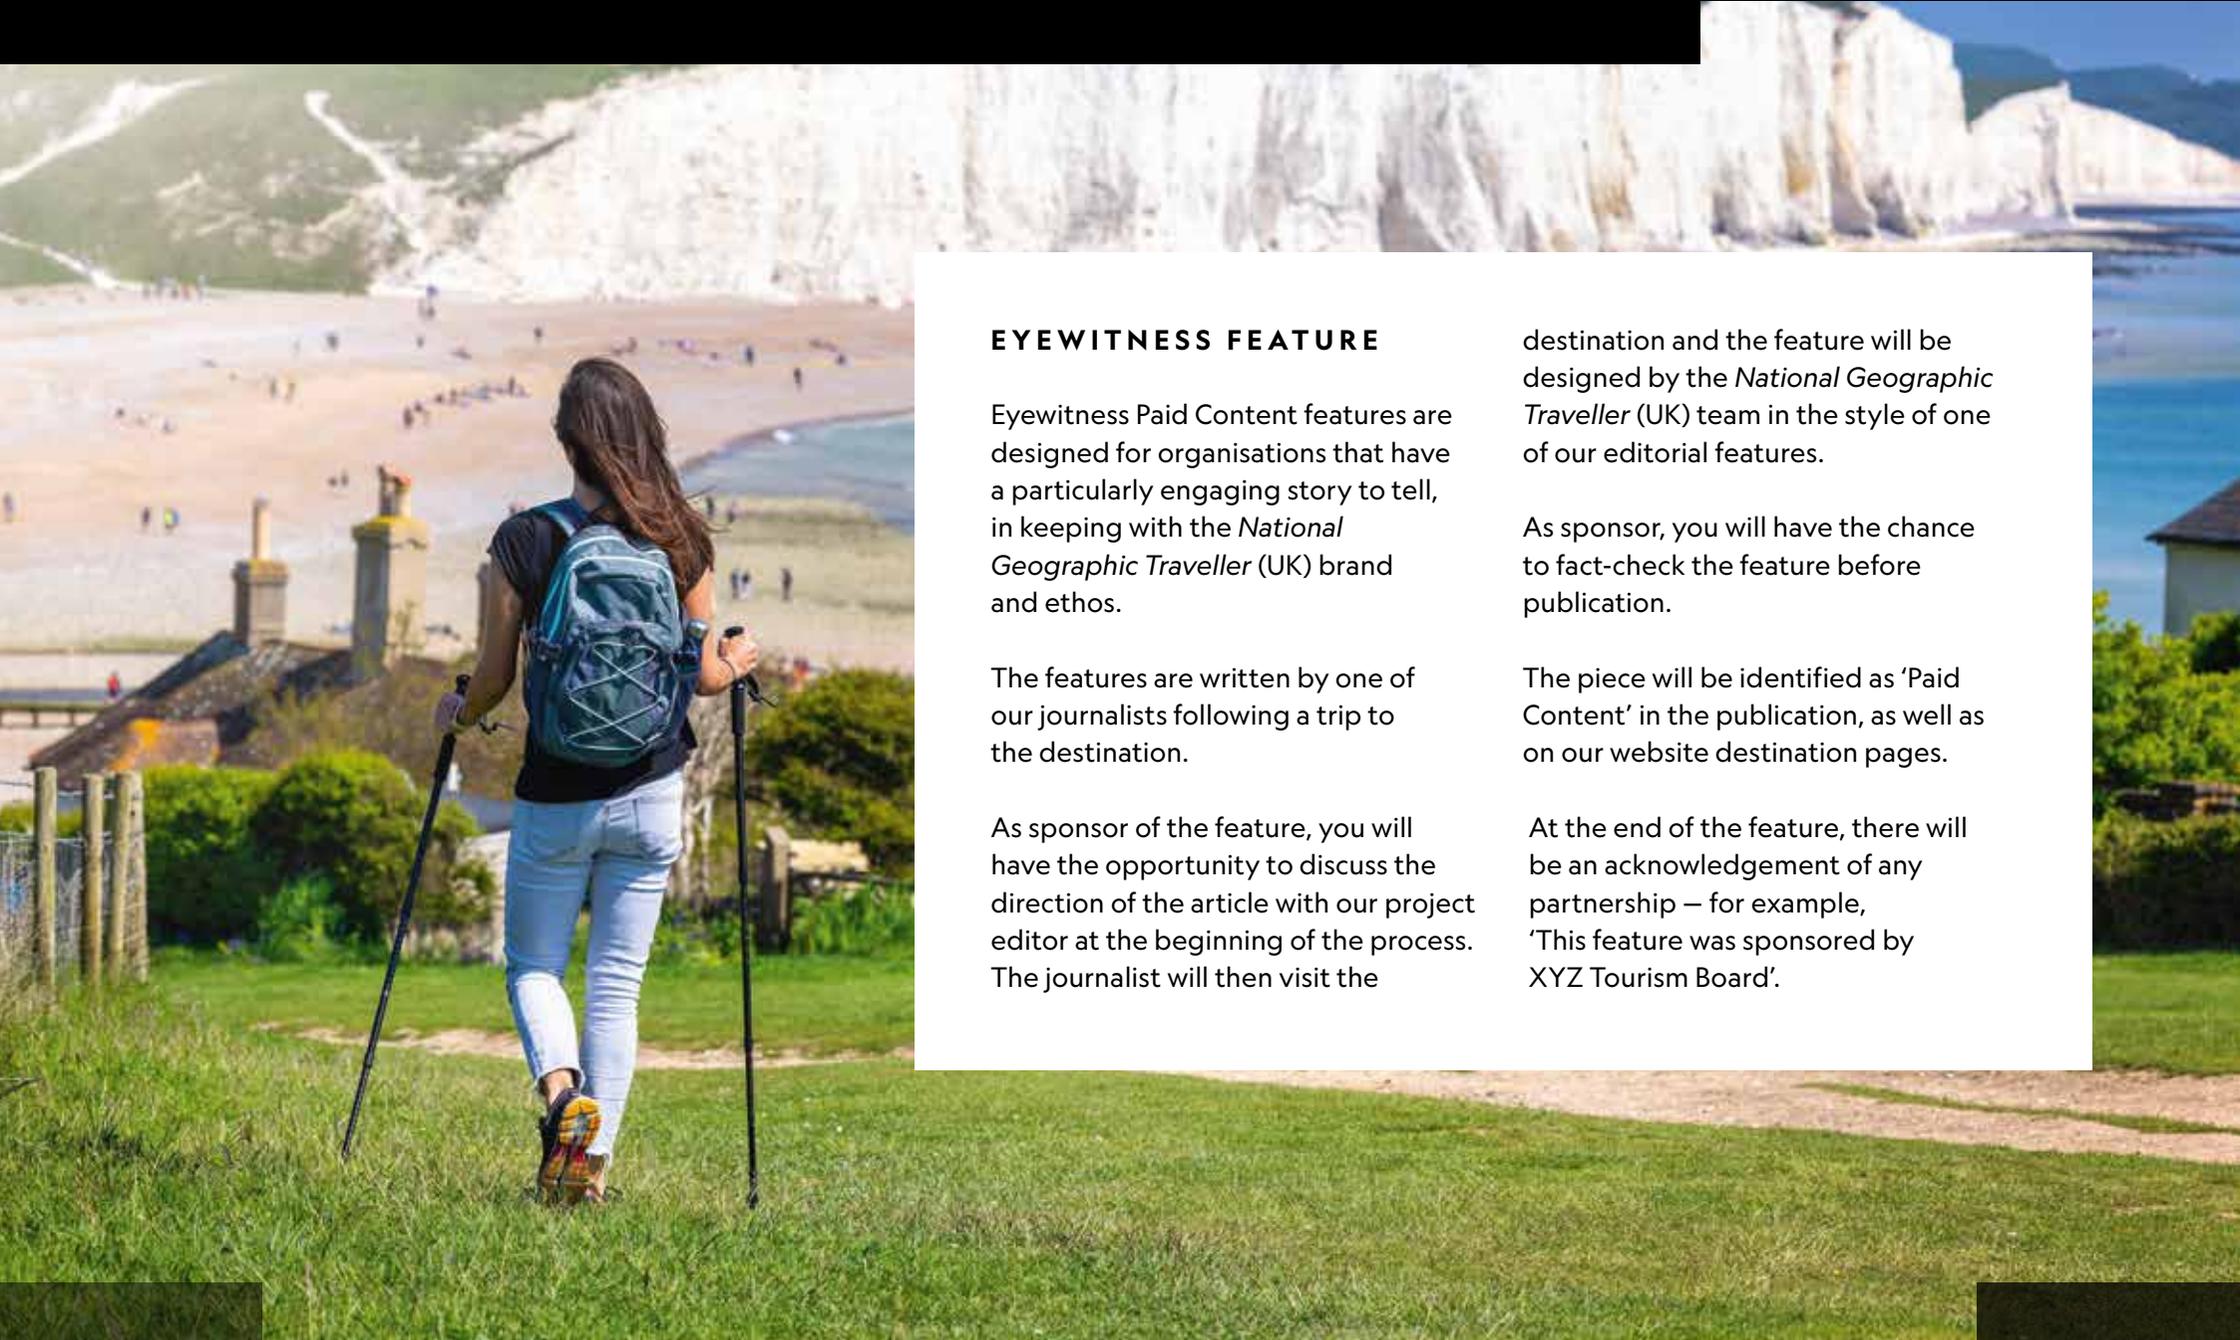

As sponsor of a guide, you'll have the opportunity to discuss the direction of the article with our project editor at the beginning of the process. The journalist will then visit the destination and the feature will be designed by our in-house team in the style of one of our regular features.

Our team will give clients the opportunity to fact-check the pages before publication, to ensure the correction of any factual mistakes, such as spelling, or incorrect image usage.

In accordance with CAP/ASA guidelines, to ensure it qualifies as a National Geographic Traveller (UK) guide, clients will not be able to request changes that deviate from the style and tone, or the design and images selected. If a client wishes to make editorial or design changes, we can accept these, but we will be unable to carry or feature the 'yellow border'.

On the contents page there will be an acknowledgement of any client relationship. e.g. 'This guide was sponsored by XYZ'.

EYEWITNESS FEATURE

Eyewitness Paid Content features are designed for organisations that have a particularly engaging story to tell, in keeping with the National Geographic Traveller (UK) brand and ethos.

The features are written by one of our journalists following a trip to the destination.

As sponsor of the feature, you will have the opportunity to discuss the direction of the article with our project editor at the beginning of the process. The journalist will then visit the destination and the feature will be designed by the National Geographic Traveller (UK) team in the style of one of our editorial features.

As sponsor, you will have the chance to fact-check the feature before publication.

The piece will be identified as 'Paid Content' in the publication, as well as on our website destination pages.

At the end of the feature, there will be an acknowledgement of any partnership – for example, 'This feature was sponsored by XYZ Tourism Board'.

THIRD-PERSON FEATURE

Third person Paid Content features offer the opportunity to tell a story to our readers through pages written, edited and designed by the National Geographic Traveller (UK) team.

A project editor is allocated to the project to discuss the theme of the feature, before working the theme into a brief and liaising with you regarding text and imagery.

Once the content of the piece has been finalised, the feature is then written and designed by the National Geographic Traveller (UK) team, sub-edited and sent to you for approval. We allow for two rounds of changes to ensure you are entirely happy with the final feature.

The feature will be clearly labelled in the magazine as 'Paid Content'. Features of more than two pages can be replicated online and will appear on the relevant destination pages of our website under the 'Paid Content' section.
